Southern Reminiscences of the War.

Colonel Heros Von Borcke, who, leaving the Prussian service, run the Charleston blockade, and, entering the Confederate army, was soon promoted to be General J. E. B. Stuart's Chief of Staff, is contributing a series of spicy reminiscences to Blackwood's Magazine which attract considerable attention among English readers. He is a great admirer of Stuart, and undoubtedly has reason for the lavish praises which he bestows upon the dead cavalry chieftain. Stuart possessed qualities of head and heart which endeared him to every soldier, and when a bullet from Sheridan's troopers laid him low, the whole South bent its head in grief.

The following is from one of the chapters of Colonel Von Borcke:

STUART'S PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS.

General Stuart was a stoutly-built man, rather above the middle height, of a most frank and winning expression, the lower part of his fine face covered with a thick brown beard, which flowed over his breast. His eye was quick and piercing, and of a light blue in repose, but charging to a darker tinge under high excitement. His whole person seemed instict with vitality, his movements were alert, his observation keen and rapid, and, altogether, he was to me the model of a dashing cavalry leader. Before the breaking out of hostilities between the North and the South, he had served in the First United States cavalry of which regiment General Joseph E. Johnston was the lieutenant-colonel, against the Indians of the far West, and was severely wounded in an encounter with the Cheyennes on the Solomon's fork of the Kansas river, in July, 1857.

In that wild life of the prairie, now treacherous savage, whose steeds were almost as fleet as the wind, Stuart had passed nearly all his waking hours in the saddle, and thus became one of the most fearless and dexterous horsemen in America, and he had acquired a love of adventure which made activity a necessity of his being. He delighted in the neighing of the chargers and the roll of the bugle, and he had something of Murat's weakness for the ostentation of the parade. He betrayed this latter quality in his jaunty uniform, which consisted of a small gray jacket, trowsers of the same stuff, and over them high military boots, a yellow silk sash and a gray slouch hat surmounted by a sweeping black ostrich plume. Thus attired, sitting gracefully on his fine horse, he did not fail to attract the notice and admiration of all who saw him ride along.

My relations with General Stuart became of a most friendly and intimate character. The greater part of my time was spent in his company. In this manner I became acquainted with his amiable and accomplished young wife, and his two bright-eyed little children, Flora and Jemmy, five and three years of age respectfully, whose tender affections I was not long in securing. Mrs. Stuart, during a considerable period of the war, lived from time to time, at her husband's qeadquarters, as they might be established at a point more or less safe and accessible; and I do not remember that I have ever seen a more interesting family circle than they presented, when, after a long ride or hazardous reconnoissance, General Stuart would seem to forget, for a brief interval, the dangers and duties of his exciting life in the enjoyment of his domestic happiness. The bold rider and beau sabreur playing with his children, or listening to his wife as she sang to him a much admired ballad, was a sweet picture in the midst of arms, the lights of which were in effective and pleasing contrast with the Rembrandtish shadows of the dark wood and the rude warriors that lay there.

General Stuart had married a daughter of Colonel Phillip St. George Cooke, of the United States Dragoons, a Virginian by birth, and West Pointer by military education, who had remained in the Federal service, and was now making war upon his native State as a Brigadier General of President Lincoln's appointment. On several occasions, during the campaign in Virginia, General Stuart came very near making a prisoner of his father-in law; and I believe it would have given greater satisfaction to send General Cooke under escort to Richmond than to capture the mighty McClellan himself.

FATE OF STUART'S SAFF.

The military family of Gen. Stuart consisted of fourteen or fifteen high spirited young fellows, boon companions in the bivouac, and excellent soldiers in the fight, of whom, alas! seven were afterward killed in battle, three received honorable and dangerous wounds, the effect of which will follow them through life, and two were carried off by the enemy to languish in loathsome Northern prisons. It was, indeed, a hazardous service upon which we had entered; but little disturbed were we by a thought of the peril, or if such a thought ever intruded upon us, it was only to unite together in closer friendship the shares of a common destiny.

Here is a pen sketch of

to whom the writer was sent with orders at the battle of Seven Pines, which, he says, owes its strange name to seven solitary pines standing just where death raged most terribly:

The battle was not renewed; the firing grew fainter and fainter, until toward one o'clock it ceased almost entirely. About this time we returned to the spot where General Longstreet had taken his position the day before, and where several of our generals were assembled, to whom I was presented by General Stuart. President Davis soon came up, congratulating the General at the issue of the day.

I had now the opportunity of closely observing General Longstreet for the first time. He was a stout man, of middle height, and most agreeable countenance; his long beard gave something leonine to his appearance; and this was manifested not less in his manners than in his dress, which consisted, like that of most of the leading Generals of the Confederate army, of a small black felt hat a tuniclike gray coat, much faded, on the collar and sleeves of which the devices indicating his rank were scarcely distinguishable, a pair of gray trowsers, and military boots with Mexican spurs, a small sword constituted the whole of his armament.

His coolness in battle, his steady courage, which was displayed rather by perfect composure under fire, and serene indifference to the extremest peril, than, like that of Stuart, in fiery charges and daring emprise; his energy in the campaign and obstinacy in the fight, and his strict obedience to orders, made him one of the most useful, as he was always among the most conspicuous officers in the Confederate service, and gained him the full confidence of the army and its commanding general, Robert E. Lee, who used to call him his war horse.

GOOSE OR GANDER.—An amusing little episode recently occurred in a railroad car in England. Shortly after the train had left the depot, an old lady jumped up and addressed a gentleman seated behind her, with "How dare you? What are you at?" The astonished gentleman replied that he had done nothing. The lady again seated herself, but in a few moments arose, full of rage and terror, and declared her neighbor was a "villain," and on arriving at the next station was about to have him arrested, when, luckily, the cause of agitation was discovered—in the shape of a goose, which, placed in a basket occupied by the lady, had, during the voyage, amused itself by pecking at her "understandings." The discovery of the criminal created great laughter among the passengers.

Biddy, while on a begging expedition, was asked by a lady if she had any children.

"Yes, mum," replied Biddy; with great readiness, "I'm the mother of an orphan."

A FEMALE BARBER IN MAINE—DESCRIPTION OF A SHAVE AT HER HANDS.—The Bangor Me. correspondent of the New York World furnishes the following incident of a recent trip to that place:

"Finding necessity for some tonsorial operations upon my arrival here yesterday morning, I very naturally inquired if there was a barber convenient. I was asked whether I would prefer being shaved by a gentleman or a lady.—(They employ this term in a highly republican sense down east.") Somewhat startled at the irresistible novelty of the idea, I replied the latter, and was forthwith directed to the shop of Miss E. L. Smith, on Main street. I passed the patriotically striped pole, and up a flight of stairs, into a pleasantly arranged room, with the usual array of razors, cream pomades very tastefully displayed. I awaited my turn, while a very large Yankee submitted the 'rough meadow of his cheek unmown' to the delecate tonsorial performance of the very modest and pretty barberess. (I herewith make my contribution to the list of feminine nouns lately becoming so popular.)

"My predecessor being shaved, I was pleasantly asked if 'I would have a shave?' and motioned to the chair, where I submitted, as 'a lamb led to the slaughter,' except that I opened my mouth several times during the operation. Remarking to my tonsorial feminine that she had an excellent opportunity for cutting her acquaintances, she tendered me the pleasing assurance, 'Oh, I won't eat ye.' Reader, were you ever shaved by a barber, feminine? With what soft and delicate touches she manipulates your hirsute cheek, and chin, and polishes it with creamy lather! How deftly, after these moments of dalliance tonsorial, she draws the shining blade (that was never 'given to grease') from its velvet case, and polishes it twice or thrice across her soft and yielding palm! And then, ah, how gentle with her left arm she supports your neck, while the right guides the polished razor smoothly down your cheek once or twice, and then deposits the debris of lather and beard upon the fragment of paper on your shoulder! [illegible] and your cheek left [illegible] the downy napkin, moistened with bay [illegible] then pomades your hair, and, adjusting it with comb and brush a la mode, removes the tonsorial garment and brushes the dust from your collar! And when you are finished, and inquire 'how much?' replies, in tones as silvery as the currency will admit, 'ten cents, sir.'

"Ugh, we go in for fun down here!" (vide supra.)

From the Nashville Bannor, Oct. 19.

Champ Ferguson before his Execution.

We visited the State Penitentiary yesterday, on Col. Shafter's staff. On entering the chamber, we found the wife and daughter of the doomed man sitting near the stove, while Champ was being shaved for the last time on earth.—On rising from the chair, he extended his hand in a pleasant manner, and greeted us with the same unflinching nerve that has characterized his every action since imprisonment. We would state that Mrs. Ferguson and her daughter arrived in the city yesterday at 10 o'clock, and through the kindness of the post commandant were permitted to spend the greater portion of the day with him. The mother and daughter are very much emaciated since we last saw them, and their pale faces plainly indicate the terrible anguish they are suffering. Champ is mild, pleasant and cheerful, and converses freely regretting his fate. He has been relieved of a heavy weight by the arrival of the little family. We had a full and free interview with him on Wednesday, and by his special request, we hold what he had to say until Sunday, when we will give a full account of our conversation with him. We concluded our conversation with him last evening in his cell, in presence of his wife and daughter. He told us that his remains would be handed over to his wife, and that she would leave for White county, in this State, in the evening. By his request, a very fine raised cherry coffin was procured for him yesterday.

He cheered his wife and daughter at intervals by a few words lightly spoken, as though he never thought of his doom. A Presbyterian minister was present and had a very pleasant interview with Champ. He appeared pleased to turn his attention on his spiritual welfare, and firmly believes in a future world and merciful God. He will meet death in a calm and firm manner. The execution will probably take place at 12 o'clock, in the yard of the Penitentiary. About three hundred passes have been issued to persons desiring to witness the execution. We will give the full particulars of it tomorrow morning, and reserve our interview for Sunday. We might state that Champ firmly maintains that he was justified in every act he has committed.

ELECTIONS.

The Elections for Governor, Representatives to Congress, and Members of Assembly, Sheriffs and Clerks, will take place on Thursday, the 9th day of November, 1865.

National Union Andrew Johnson Ticket!

FOR GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM W. HOLDEN,
OF WAKE COUNTY.

FOR THE COMMONS,
DR. N. F. LUCKEY, AND
LUKE BLACKMER, ESQ.

The Peoples Ticket.

Luke Blackmer Esq. and Moses L. Holmes are the people's choice for the Commons in the next General Assembly of North Carolina.

MANY VOTERS.

How do many voters know that Mosses L. Holmes is the people's choice? He has been before them time and again and he never yet has been able to demonstrate this fact. We are verry much inclined to doubt the presumptuous assertion of the "pretended, so-called" "many voters." No the people have never yet endorsed him, and it would be marvelous were they to do so under any circumstances. Mr. Holms is known to be a man of but little capacity, if we except his shrewdness to acquire money. He is as unfit for a legislator as a cow is to make a trip across the desert of Sahara. The people want no narrow minded men in the next legislature. The duties are too important to be entrusted to the hands of mere skeeming politicians or men who think of nothing but how to make the almighty dollar and count their change. The truth is this ticket was brought out by a few factious radicals, who desire to dictate to the people in the matter of selecting candidates. We do not believe Mr. Blackmer is their choice, but they durst not bring out the men they have first selected. Hence they adopted Mr. Blackmer and tacked on Holmes thinking, doubtless, that by this chicinery they would get him dragged through. But it wont do. They have been fairly caught at their own trick and we are determined that the people shall, not only know this, but the impotent character of the exponents of their radical views, [illegible] Blackmer by a few moneyed merchants about Salisbury and proclaimed the "people's choice." What arrogance, fellow citizens? Will you allow a few moneyed men about Salisbury to tell you who you shall vote for? It is your right to make your own selections, and we believe you will frown down this little attempt to deny you this your high privilege.

Col. S. H. Walkup.

We were glad to meet this veteran old soldier and patriot in our town yesterday morning. The Col. is out canvassing the district for Congress. He is looking very well, and is in fine spirits. He thinks he will make a good run, and we hope he will. He has the purest record of any public man with whom we are acquainted. His unceasing efforts to prevent the secession of the State are well know, and his unsullied and consistent record since, is highly creditable to the man and entitles him to our favorable consideration.

WORTH & DANIEL.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of business men to the card of this well and favorably known old firm, which will be found in another column of the paper.

That portion of the North Carolina Railroad under the control of the military authorities, from Raleigh to Goldsboro', has been turned over to the Stockholders and the route is now open, for shipping to Wilmington.

A BRUTE OF A HUSBAND.—"My wife has gone to visit her mother."

"I am happy to be able to state that the children accompanied her. Peace, quietness and felicity reign in my dwelling. I come and go unquestioned. I stay out late at night without fear of rebuke. I lie abed of mornings, and no one insists on my getting up. My friends pass the evening with me, and there is no one to tell me the next day that the window curtains are filled with tobacco smoke, and the parlor has the fragrance of a bar room. If two or three friends come home to dine with me, the cook never asks why I brought them, nor complains of a headache. What is more, she never insists upon having a new silk dress every week, nor burst into tears if I utter crude and naughty words. The fact is, if there be one thing I like more than another, it is to have my wife visit her mother."

The following we find in the Raleigh Standard, to which we call special attention:

IMPORTANT.

By reference to the Governor's proclamation and ordinances accompanying, it will be seen that no one is required to show a certificate of the amnesty oath in this election. It is necessary, however, that the oath be taken. Of course the excepted classes are excluded from voting. Any Justice of the Peace may administer the oath. The attention of all the Inspectors of the Polls is invited especially to the ordinance providing for the election of members of the General Assembly, Governor, and Representatives to Congress. Under the provision of this ordinance Inspectors are directed to examine on oath all challenged voters, touching the question whether they are duly qualified to vote by having taken and subscribed the amnesty oath, either of President Johnson or President Lincoln.

Other papers are respectfully requested to disseminate this intelligence.

☞ During the war we advised and counseled harmony among our own people, and since the war closed the necessity for harmony and good feeling is as great as it ever was. Therefore we regret that opposition to Gov. Holden has been brought out. We do not pretend to say or intimate that there is no right to an opposition, but we do say that it is bad policy, and we think in violation of what appeared to be a general understanding until within the last two or three weeks. Gov. Holden, since his appointment as Provisional Governor, has discharged his duties with fairness and liberality towards those who have been his opponents—by his influence with the authorities he has saved us from a vast amount of trouble. Our troubles and perplexities have been great anthow, but Mr. Holden has done much to keep them from being increased. No harm to the State could have resulted from allowing him to be elected Governor without opposition, but much good might have been accomplished, and the people more speedily restored to their ancient rights.

What we want now is permission to have our own people manage their own affairs—we want to be placed under the civil law and not kept under military dominion—we want the Courts re established so that rogues and rascals may receive sure and swift punishment—we want the vagrant laws enforced so as to prevent negroes from prowling over the country stealing and committing various depredations. We believe that Gov. Holden can do more to satisfy our desires in these respects than any other man in the South, and therefore [illegible] ing election. Besides, he is qualified in every respect to fill the position, and we are sure that make a faithful and prudent officer.

Another reason why we regret that opposition has been raised to Gov. Holden, is that it forces men into combinations, or parties, before our common difficulties are settled. The formation of parties now in North Carolina will certainly embarrass the settlement of questions in which all our people have a common interest. The people are being divided at a time when everything should be done to unite them—excitement is being crosted at the very time when quiet and concord should prevail. Gov. Holden has been zealous in striving to prevent divisions and bad feeling, but others seem determined that strife shall be engendered. Let the consequences rest upon those who have needlessly aroused division and contention

We care nothing now about Mr. Holden's past political course or record. The question should be, has he done his duty in his present position, and cannot he still do much towards relieving our people from the difficulties consequent upon their failures in the late war. The State Convention, by a unanimous vote, returned him thanks for the faithful manner in which he has discharged his duties as Provisional Governor, and would it not be the best policy to "let well enough alone." We think so, and therefore we make an appeal in favor of his election.—Charlotte Democrat.

EMIGRANTS ARRIVING.—On Wednesday night arrived in this city the first instalments of emigrants from the old countries beyond the sea—hale, stalwart men; stout, blooming women; sturdy, flaxen-headed urchins. They come directly from Cork leaving behind the land of teeming population and worn out lands, to work out their fortunes in this Golconda of agricultural wealth.

The encouragement of emigration should be the great object now of the Virginia planter. For the present, at least, negro labor is unprofitable. The colored man works reluctantly, not having yet unlearned his carefully misconceived lesson concerning freedom, and the quickest solution of this problem of labor is to ignore the race until they have learned their necessities and responsibilities, engaging in their places willing workers, men of strong arms and anxious hearts, who only ask opportunity to display their enery. These Irish emigrants coming from their hard-earned starvation, will gladly throw their whole hearts into work which clothes and houses and feeds their wives and children.

The harvest is here, the laborers are anxious to reap it, and it only remains for the lords of the vineyard to send out for the unwilling idles

We cordially welcome these pioneers to Petersburg, and promise our exertions to secure for them the consideration, legislation and sympathy which will insure their success in their adopted country.—Petersburg Ind'x.

RELEASE OF JOHN MITCHELL.

We congratulate the country upon another advance towards its republicanism in the release of John Mitchell, without conditions, from his confinement at Fortress Monroe. It was difficult to understand by what process of reasoning could be reconciled the fact of his retention in prision with the just and conciliatory policy that Mr. Johnson has declared, in regard to those who, in subordinate or unofficial capacities, were connected with the late Confederacy. [illegible] was hope for it, supported it with all the power of his vigorous intellect and gifted pen. He could not have done otherwise without violating the instincts of his true and impassioned nature. Once embarked in an interprise that enlisted his sympathies and appealed to his convictions, it was impossible for him to be lukewarm or hold in check the promptings of his noble and impulsive spirit. Those who condemn the Southern people for their struggle for independence may condemn John Mitchell for having joined them in the undertaking, but no one whose good opinion is worth having will censure him for having been fearless, thorough and constant in his adhesion to the cause that he conscientiously embraced. To punish him more severely than his comrades because his talents and his courage rendered him conspicuous, would be to rebuke nature for the liberality of her good gifts.

Mr. Johnson, if he continues to throw open the doors of Federal bastiles and to efface the traces of arbitrary power, will soon perfect the bond of good feeling between himself and the masses. The liberation of Mr. Mitchell will earn for him especially the gratitude of a large and influential class of our adopted citizens, whose political friendship and suffrages, have never failed to be of value to public men. Mr. Mitchell, beneath a prison roof, could never have been compelled to bend the knee in allegiance to any power; but we believe that, as a free man, he will cheerfully assist in the labor of reconstruction; and, at all events, will work hand and brain, in the interests of his native land.

N. Y. Times.

FREAKS OF A TORNADO.—A late tornado in Minnesota kicked up some queer pranks. It blew eight oxen over a river 800 yards wide. It took all the water out of a pond, carried it a mile, and then set it down on Major Doran's farm in the shape of a small lake. It blew a man's boots off. Another man's coat was not only blown short, but actually buttoned from top to bottom. One old lady went up like a balloon, was carried two and a half miles, and was finally landed astride a telegraph wire, where she was found by her grandson and relieved by a ladder. Judge Morgan said the wind not only carried off his dwelling house, but his sub cellar and two wells.

Woman is said to be a mere delusion, but it is something pleasant to hug delusions.

CAPT'S. CROUSE AND MAYES.

We are very much gratified to learn that these excellent officers are retained on the Military Commission. They are both gentlemen of high character and first class officers. We feel assured that public justice will be administered wherever they have a voice.

They seem to understand and appreciate the peculiar elements of Southern society, more than any Northern gentlemen we net with. The other members we do not know—but if they are anything like Capts. Crouse and Mayes, the public may be satisfied that just and righteous judgments will be rendered.

A Ticket for the People to Unite On.

Dr. N. F. Lucky and Luke Blackmer, Esq., will be most heartily supported by their numerous friends for seats in the House of Commons at the next General Assembly of North Carolina.
